TABLATURE GUIDE

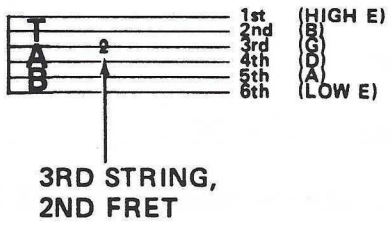
The songs in this collection include the vocal line, lyrics, chords and transcribed lead guitar (backup and solos). In addition, a line of tablature is given directly below the notated guitar part to indicate where the notes are to be played. In the tablature example below, each line represents a single string—beginning with the top line 1st string down to the bottom line 6th string. Numbers placed on the lines give the fret number.



3RD STRING,
2ND FRET

NOTATION

There are several types of symbols found in the solos and rhythm guitar parts which represent various playing techniques. The following is an explanation of their meaning.

Choke — A slur mark below a number means that a lower note is fretted and choked or stretched up to the notated pitch. Place your finger on the fret indicated by the first number in the TAB line. Bend up to the pitch of the connected number to the right.

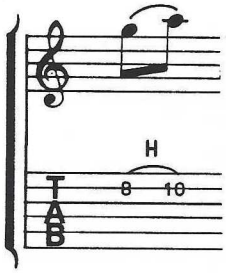
Example: play 7th fret, 3rd string D, bend up to E.

If the parentheses are on the first of two numbers tied by a slur, it means that the note is picked in choked position and "let down" to normal position.

Example: play 7th fret, 3rd string D choked up to E, release back to D.

Hammer-on and pull-off — The slur mark is used to indicate a hammer-on or pull-off.

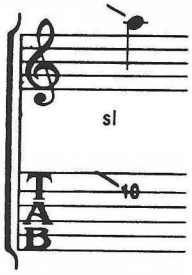
Example: play 8th fret, 2nd string G, hammer-on to 10th fret, 2nd string A.



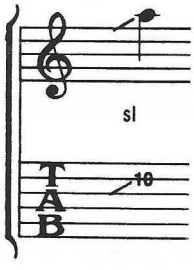
Example: play 8th fret, 3rd string E♭, pull off to 7th fret D, then to 5th fret C.

Slide — There are four possible slides. The type of slide depends on the location and direction of the line to the notehead. Slide up to the note or down to the note by one fret when the line precedes the note. A line following the note indicates a slide up or down after the note has been played.

Example: play 11th fret, 2nd string A♯ and slide down to 10th fret A.



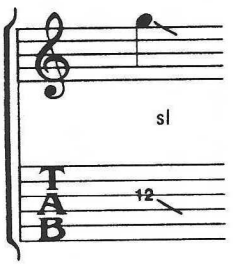
Example: play 9th fret, 2nd string A♭, and slide up to 10th fret A.



The slide after a note has been played does not end on a specific pitch. Begin lifting your finger after sliding two frets so that the string is eventually muted.

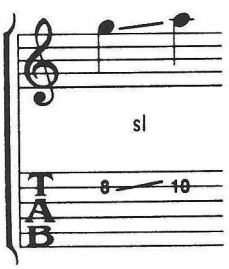
Example: play 12th fret, 3rd string G and slide up.

Example: play 12th fret, 3rd string G and slide down.



Slide to a specific note — A line connecting two notes indicates a slide from the first to the second note.

Example: play 8th fret, 2nd string G and slide up to 10th fret A.



Example: play 10th fret, 1st string D and slide down to 8th fret C.

Shake — Make a sustaining tremolo effect by shaking the hand, from the wrist, while fretting a note.

Muted And Half-Muted Strings — Mute a string by touching it with the left hand, but not fretting it, to deaden the sound. The pitch of the half-muted string is slightly audible, so a specific fret position is indicated.

ELVIS: THE ROOTS OF ROCK GUITAR (AN INTRODUCTION)

SCOTTY MOORE, HANK GARLAND AND JAMES BURTON

The guitar solos in this book charted the course for rock and roll guitar. . . not only because they were so widely heard, but because they were played by extraordinary lead guitarists on the cutting edge of rockabilly, country and pop. These instrumentalists combined different styles of music, broke new ground and helped make the electric guitar the main soloing voice in rock and roll.

Volumes have been written about Elvis Presley's influence: He brought the elements together to create the prototype rock band and made this new pop music form the chief musical preoccupation of the young. He made the guitar America's number one household musical instrument. And he broke down some barriers between black and white musical styles.

Bill Haley and His Comets had the first rock smash hit with ROCK AROUND THE CLOCK, and a comparison of Bill Haley's and Elvis' sound reveals some of Presley's strength. Haley's band sound combined western swing and urban R&B á la Louis Jordan (one of Chuck Berry's main influences). Elvis' musical roots were earthier: on the "hillbilly" side, he derived more from grittier country artists like Hank Snow and the bluegrass king, Bill Monroe; and country blues artists like "Big Boy" Arthur Crudup (writer of Elvis' first record, THAT'S ALL RIGHT) influenced Elvis more than the jazzier, uptown R&B acts.

On Elvis' earlier Sun Record sessions (recorded in 1954 and '55 in the Memphis Sun studio), he sang and played rhythm acoustic guitar while Bill Black played upright bass and Scotty Moore played lead electric guitar (a gold Gibson ES-295 hollowbody). After a few sessions, D.J. Fontana was added on drums, and a basic rock format was set which would be widely imitated for decades: singer, rhythm guitar, lead guitar, bass and drums. The Sun sessions pointed the way for rock in general and for lead guitarists in particular: Jimmy Page said that Scotty Moore's playing on BABY, LET'S PLAY HOUSE inspired him to take up guitar. For years, Keith Richards, while on tour with the Rolling Stones, always carried with him a sound system and tape of the Sun sessions for inspiration. For generations of guitarists, Elvis' records have been the blueprint and the source.

SCOTTY MOORE

Scotty Moore is the seminal rockabilly guitarist and one of the three or four artists who "invented" rock guitar. He was born in Humbolt, Tennessee eighty miles from Memphis, and started playing guitar at the age of eight. His father and three brothers played country and bluegrass music for fun. At the age of 21, Moore and his neighbor, Bill Black, had a group called the Starlight Wranglers which played in Memphis honky-tonks. They played mostly country with some pop and R&B thrown in — anything that would get the folks dancing and sell beer. Moore knew Sun Records' producer, Sam Phillips, and the two had often discussed Phillips' idea of finding a white singer who could deliver black music and make it accessible to white audiences.

In 1954, Phillips introduced Presley to Moore and Black, and the three spent months experimenting at Sun studios before they came up with the combination of hillbilly and R&B for which they were looking. Because they were only a trio, Moore had unprecedented freedom. For the first time in his life, he was able to mix up all the guitar styles he knew: fingerpicking blues guitar, the slicker, up-the-neck jazzier fingerpicking of Merle Travis and Chet Atkins, the single-note electric soloing of Les Paul, Tal Farlow and any other jazz guitarists Moore might have heard; the jazzy electric western swing guitarists and single-note electric blues artists like B.B. King and T-Bone Walker. All these influences can be heard in Moore's solos.

BLUES FINGERPICKING

On the Sun sessions, Moore's solos and backup have that light, breezy fingerpicking sound most of the rockabilly guitarists achieved by playing with a flatpick and using the middle finger to pick upward on treble strings. With this set-up, a guitarist can switch instantly from fingerpicking to B.B. King-style single-note soloing. Sometimes (as in MYSTERY TRAIN) Moore played the continuous, thumping thumb/bass notes typical of Travis, Atkins and the Mississippi Delta blues players like Mississippi John Hurt, Son House and Skip James. More often, his thumb/bass notes were sparse and irregular. Compare the two styles below:

from MYSTERY TRAIN (thumb plays a bass note on every beat)

from MY BABY LEFT ME (more typical, sparse thumb/bass)

FINGERPICKING WITH MOVEABLE CHORDS

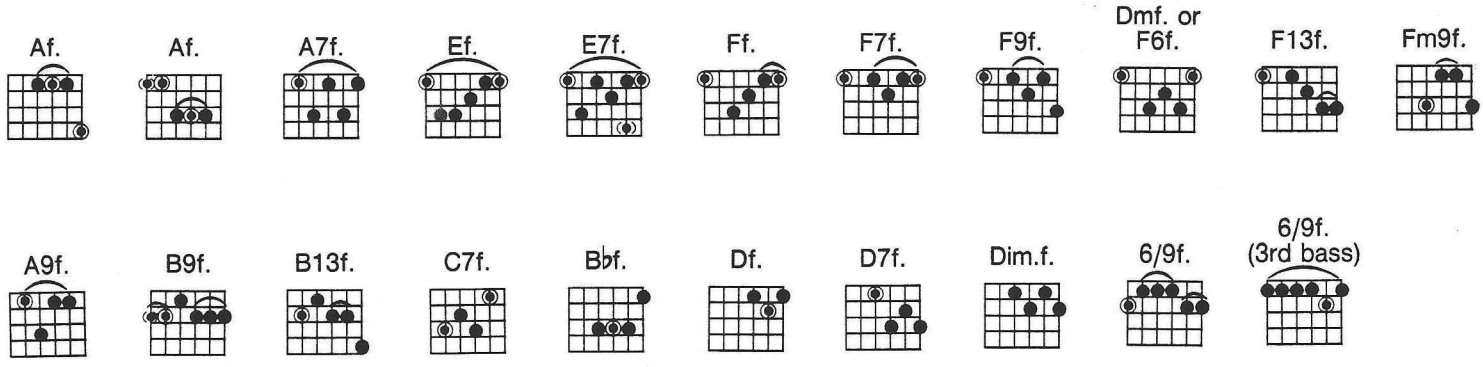
On MYSTERY TRAIN, THAT'S ALL RIGHT, MILK COW BLUES BOOGIE, JUST BECAUSE and I DON'T CARE IF THE SUN DON'T SHINE (the Sun session tunes included in this book) and in MY BABY LEFT ME (an early RCA tune), Moore fingerpicked up the neck, using Atkins/Travis-style moveable chord formations like these:

1. Dots in parentheses are optional notes.
2. "f." means "formation."
3. Some of the chords require you to reach the left thumb over the neck to fret the 6th string.
4. The roots of the chord formations are circled.



Look at the above-mentioned tunes to see how Moore used these chord formations in his fingerpicking. In up-the-neck finger-picking, the soloist finds melodies within the moveable chord forms, or plays melodic variations by adding bluesy or jazzy notes to the familiar formations (such as 6th, 9ths, flatted sevenths, flatted thirds, etc.). For example, here are some ways to vary an F formation using just one finger:

Moore's fingerpicked solos in the Sun session tunes are bluesy and stylized. Unlike Atkins and Travis, who often played precise melodies, Moore (in a country/blues tradition) often alluded to the melody briefly, then ad-libbed on a ninth, dominant seventh or sixth chord, or played a stylized lick like the one below.

THE MINOR SECOND LICK

This is a typical rockabilly lick in which you pair a melody note with the note a half-step below it; this gives you a bluesy discord:

SOLOING IN THE BLUES POSITIONS

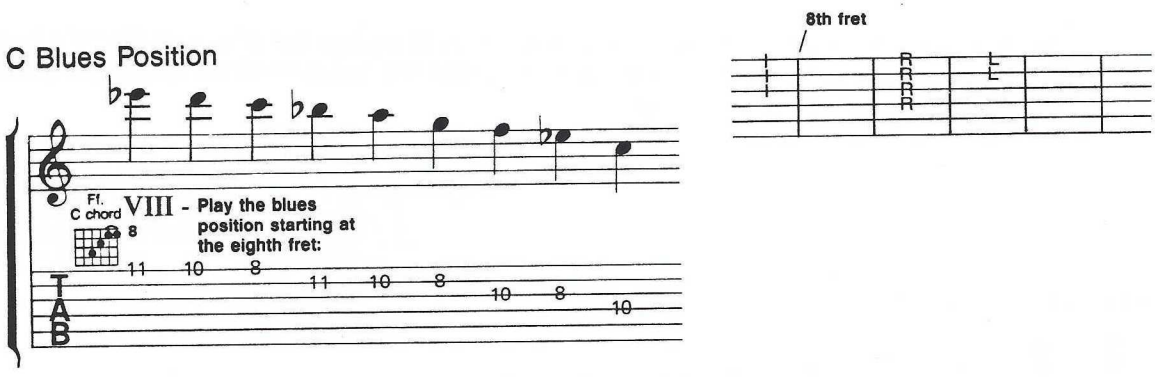
Toward the end of 1955, RCA bought Elvis' contract with Sun Records from Sam Phillips for $35,000. Chet Atkins produced the string of RCA Elvis hits that followed; so Moore's new producer (and sometimes rhythm guitarist) was one of his boyhood guitar heroes.

Moore has said that the Sun sessions were very improvisational and everything he played was ad-lib. With the move to RCA, Moore's backup playing became less spontaneous; he tended to find a backup pattern and stick to it throughout a tune. He also fingerpicked less, and played more single-note blues licks in the style popularized by B.B. King and T-Bone Walker.

Most of his blues licks are based on this blues scale/position, which relates to the F formation (play the F formation to get your left hand in position for this blues scale):

C Blues Position



Here are some typical blues position-based passages from Moore's playing:

from HOUND DOG

from BLUE SUEDE SHOES

Sometimes, while in the blues position, Moore played "unison bends": He picked the 2nd string and bent or choked it with his left hand to the same note he was playing on the 1st string. This is a technique popularized by Chuck Berry and, before him, Charlie Christian; it has a bluesy, discordant sound similar to the minor second lick:

from BLUE SUEDE SHOES from HEARTBREAK HOTEL

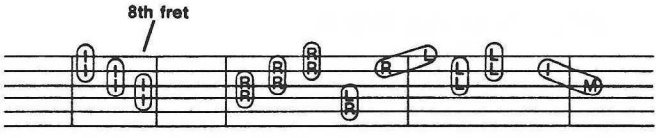
While playing in the blues position, Moore often took a page out of Chuck Berry's book and played double-note licks. Here's how to adapt the blues position to double-notes, followed by some sample soloing:



C Blues Position double-notes

from HOUND DOG from BLUE SUEDE SHOES

BOOGIE-WOOGIE BASS LINES

On many of the RCA recordings, Moore played boogie-woogie bass lines. Usually they were backup patterns, but they occasionally appeared in solos. They became a standard rockabilly guitar sound. There are examples in JAILHOUSE ROCK, TOO MUCH, BLUE SUEDE SHOES and HARD HEADED WOMAN:

from TOO MUCH

from JAILHOUSE ROCK

PIANISTIC TRIADS AND DOUBLE/NOTE SOLOS

In some of his solos, Moore strummed double- or triple-note clusters, almost as if he were imitating the boogie-woogie piano-pounding styles of Fats Domino, Little Richard or his fellow Sun recording artist, Jerry Lee Lewis:

from READY TEDDY

POWER CHORDS AND CHOP CHORDS

In solos and backup, Moore often strummed first-position or moveable chords, playing all downstrokes, in a style that would later be called "power chording":

from JAILHOUSE ROCK (solo)

from HOUND DOG (backup)

He also played staccato "chop chords" to push the rhythm. Sometimes these were syncopated; other times they were evenly placed on the second and fourth beats of a measure, like a snare drum or like mandolin chops in a bluegrass band. Either way, he strummed the chord, then damped or muted it by lifting the fretting fingers slightly so that they touched the strings, but did not depress them against the fretboard.

from BLUE SUEDE SHOES
(syncopated chop chords)

from I DON'T CARE IF THE SUN DON'T SHINE
(evenly placed chop chords)

Scotty Moore has stayed out of the limelight for many years, playing music for his own enjoyment and running a production company in Nashville. He left an indelible mark on rock guitar history in his work with Elvis. His driving solos matched Elvis' vocals. That high energy, plus his original and inventive combination of country, blues, R&B and swing/jazz guitar styles have inspired countless rock guitarists. He is truly one of the main innovators who made rock and roll happen. (Many thanks to Gail Pollock in Scotty Moore's production company in Nashville for her help and information.)

HANK GARLAND

From 1958 to 1961, Nashville session guitarist Hank Garland played lead guitar on many Elvis songs, including IT'S NOW OR NEVER, ARE YOU LONESOME TONIGHT?, A FOOL SUCH AS I, and from this collection, LITTLE SISTER, A BIG HUNK O' LOVE and I NEED YOUR LOVE TONIGHT.

Born in 1930 in South Carolina, Garland was playing Carter-style guitar at the age of six and copying everything he heard on the radio. At the age of fifteen, playing with Paul Howard's Cotton Pickers, he brought the Grand Ole Opry audience to their feet in appreciation for one of his electric guitar solos(!) — though the Opry had only recently reluctantly allowed the use of the amplified guitar on their stage.

Along with his friends Chet Atkins, Ernest Tubbs' guitarist Billy Byrd and session guitarist Harold Bradley, Garland was a chief architect of the Nashville sound. He played lead guitar on hits by Webb Pierce, Kitty Wells, Jim Reeves, Brenda Lee, Patti Page, Patsy Cline and many more. He also was a presence on many records that defined Nashville's rockabilly phase. Besides the Elvis sides, he played on songs of the Everly Brothers and Jerry Lee Lewis. He played on some of Elvis' last concerts prior to the singer's eight-year performing hiatus.

Spurred on by Chet Atkins' comments about Django Reinhardt, Garland became involved with jazz guitar. His jazz recordings and the jazzy influence he brought to his sessions helped close the gap between country and jazz for a lot of players and listeners. The Gibson Byrdland guitar, used by some jazz and rock guitarists, was named after Garland and Billy Byrd.

Garland played appropriately rocky/bluesy guitar on the Elvis sides. The driving Chuck Berry-like fills and solo on BIG HUNK O' LOVE and the "swamp-rock" sound of his guitar on LITTLE SISTER fit Elvis perfectly.

JAMES BURTON

The extraordinary James Burton and his Telecaster guitar led the Elvis Presley band from Elvis' 1969 concert comeback until his death in 1977. Since then, Burton has toured with John Denver, Emmylou Harris and Jerry Lee Lewis, and has remained very much in demand as a session guitarist in country and rock.

Before he joined Elvis, Burton was already a major figure in rock, country and pop. Born in 1939 in Shreveport, Louisiana, he was playing professionally at the age of fourteen. At fifteen he became a member of the band for Louisiana Hayride, a live broadcast country show second only in popularity to the Opry. He had played a bit of steel guitar, and swapping licks on his Telecaster with the Hayride steel guitarist was a key element in his early training. String-bending became one of Burton's trademarks. He was one of the first electric guitarists to put banjo strings on his guitar (they were lighter in gauge than available guitar strings) to facilitate bending notes.

In Burton's first recording session, he contributed the memorable guitar licks to Dale Hawkins' hit, SUSIE Q. Later, still in his teens, he played on nearly all Ricky Nelson's hits and appeared regularly on the Nelsons' '50s TV show. In the early-to-mid '60s, Burton played lead guitar on many of the Buck Owens and Merle Haggard records. These sides introduced the famous sputtering "chicken pickin'" guitar sound that has been widely imitated in country music ever since. Burton has described his staccato single-note style as "spitting on the strings" or "like being a drummer."

Burton was a member of the '65 Shindig TV show band (the Shindogs), a job that increased his visibility, resulting in more session work. Among others, he has worked with Waylon Jennings, The Monkees, The Byrds, The Supremes, Ray Charles, Johnny Mathis, Frank Sinatra and the Osmonds.

His work with Emmylou Harris showed that Burton can be both lyrically delicate and blisteringly hot in his leads. With Elvis he consistently played driving rock. His playing on MY BABY LEFT ME, THAT'S ALL RIGHT, C.C. RIDER and HEARTBREAK HOTEL (all from live concert Lps) has samples of his chicken pickin' style, string-bending licks and the typical rockabilly fingerpicking (Burton holds a flat-pick the usual way and also uses a metal fingerpick on his middle finger).

from HEARTBREAK HOTEL

from C.C. RIDER

from MY BABY LEFT ME

Burton, like Moore, fingerpicked bluesy licks in first position (see MY BABY LEFT ME, THAT'S ALL RIGHT and C.C. RIDER). He used up-the-neck moveable chords similar to the ones Moore used, and often paid his respects to Moore by imitating many of his licks on the older Elvis tunes. Burton used blues scales and played positions other than the familiar first position Moore usually used. (These are noted in the solos as they occur.)

The tunes herein are arranged in chronological order, except that Burton's "covers" of older tunes are placed back-to-back with Scotty Moore's originals, for easier comparison. Along with individual notes on each tune, there's a rhythm guitar pattern indicating Elvis' acoustic backup rhythmic feel. Transcriptions are in the same keys as the original recordings, and all these tunes and Lps are still available . . . so listen and play along with the records as you study the tunes.

All the "heavy" players of any musical style know their roots and study the traditions that led to the "contemporary" sound. Rock guitarists: Here's the rock and roll Rosetta Stone. Visit it as often as you can. Besides the techniques and musical ideas, there's a raw energy, an urgency and a frenetic, improvisational feel here that will remind you of what rock and roll at its best is all about.

THAT'S ALL RIGHT, MAMA

(aka THAT'S ALL RIGHT)

(Scotty Moore)

The Elvis legend has it that on July 6, 1954, after fruitless hours in the studio, doing their first session together, Presley, Scotty Moore and Bill Black struck up this "Big Boy" Arthur Crudup blues for fun, during a break. Sam Phillips recognized it to be the sound he was looking for, and it became Elvis' first release. The single symbolizes Presley's R&B/hillbilly synthesis: The R&B tune is backed with Bill Monroe's bluegrass hit, BLUE MOON OF KENTUCKY (re-vamped from the original slow waltz to an upbeat rockabilly tempo).

Moore's fingerpicking fills and solo have an appealing, breezy, ad-lib quality. The first few bars indicate Elvis' rhythm guitar feel.

(James Burton)

This live track, recorded June 10, 1972 at Madison Square Garden, is played at a faster tempo than the original. Still, Burton imitates Moore's feel and plays an almost historically accurate solo until the last five or six bars, when he can't resist doing some chicken pickin'.

The vocal line is not included in this arrangement because it almost exactly duplicates the original vocal (in the Scotty Moore version, above). Burton's solos and backup guitar parts are indicated in the music. (The same procedure is followed in HEARTBREAK HOTEL and MY BABY LEFT ME, which also include a Scotty Moore and a James Burton version.)

I DON'T CARE IF THE SUN DON'T SHINE

This tune and the next (JUST BECAUSE) both recorded in September of 1954, are much more country than most of Elvis' Sun songs, and they reveal Moore's country roots. Notice the Chet Atkins-like lick Moore plays on the first D7 chord (this actually occurs the second time around the tune). There are also country-style chord chops, a lot of fingerpicking, and the "minor second" lick discussed in the Introduction.

I DON'T CARE IF THE SUN DON'T SHINE was the flip side to Elvis' cover of Roy Brown's GOOD ROCKIN' TONIGHT, thus repeating the pattern of backing an R&B hit with a country standard.

JUST BECAUSE

On this September, 1954 recording, the trio was joined by drummer D.J. Fontana. They were covering a Patti Page country/pop hit on which Hank Garland played lead guitar! Like I DON'T CARE IF THE SUN DON'T SHINE, the tune has a country feel, and Moore displays his Atkins/Travis chops. He fingerpicks most of the tune. On the G9 chord during his solo, he plays an Atkins-like descending lick; the solo includes the minor second lick. He uses jazzy chords (6ths, 13ths, 6/9s and diminished chords) and plays a jazzy turn-around during the first ending.

MILK COW BLUES BOOGIE

Recorded in December of 1954, this is based on a tune by Sleepy John Estes, a black country blues singer/guitarist from Tennessee. Elvis began the record as a slow blues moan, then stopped the band and told them: "Hold it fellas! That don't move me. Let's get real, real gone, for a change." They started over at a much quicker tempo.

Moore's backup is all fingerpicking, mostly on one repetitious pattern. The opening to his solo has a real rural blues feel. The tune is a twelve-bar blues, but, like the early blues guitarists, Elvis and the band add extra bars whenever the spirit moves them.

This cover of Junior Parker's blues tune was Elvis' fifth and final Sun release. It was recorded in February of 1955 and included drummer D.J. Fontana. Moore fingerpicks throughout with a very country/blues feel.

(Scotty Moore)

This was Elvis' first RCA release, recorded January 10, 1956, and it went to the top of the pop charts. Like the first few RCA sides, it imitates the strange Sun sessions' echo sound. Moore plays some Chuck Berry-style, double-note blues licks and unison bends.

(James Burton)

On this live Madison Square Garden cut, Burton's guitar dominates the track more than Moore's did on the original. And, he is allowed a full solo in the middle of the tune (Moore split the solo with the piano player). The flavor of his playing resembles Moore's, but his solo displays some Burton chicken pickin' and string bending. Notice how he plays off the G blues position during (and just before) the G7 chord in the solo.

MY BABY LEFT ME

Elvis recorded this Arthur Crudup blues on January 30, 1956. It was the only RCA release that featured a non-stop fingerpicking Scotty Moore, with the ad-lib feel of the Sun session records (although the introductory two-bar pattern dominated Moore's backup). There are both up-the-neck and first position finger-picking styles, and a much looser approach than on most of the RCA sessions.

(James Burton)

From the 1974 "LIVE ON STAGE IN MEMPHIS" Lp, this track is faster and less laid-back than the original, but Burton imitates Moore's basic backup lick. His solo, however, features all the Burton trademark sounds. He makes use of a second and fourth blues position:

BLUE SUEDE SHOES

Recorded by Presley the same day as MY BABY LEFT ME, BLUE SUEDE SHOES went to #20 on the charts. Carl Perkins' original version, recorded at Sun studios in '55, was the first song to go to the top of the pop, rhythm and blues and country charts. It made Perkins a star and put Sun Records on the map.

Moore plays single-note and double-note blues scale/licks with a slightly "swing" feel. Notice the unusual A add 9 chord formation and the boogie-woogie bass lines toward the end of the tune.

HOUND DOG

Scotty Moore's classic solos have a lunatic, wild edge to match Elvis' vocal intensity. Presley sang a garbled lyric that lost much of the meaning of Leiber and Stoller's song (he was copying a Las Vegas lounge act cover of the Big Mama Thornton hit), but white teenage America didn't care. The song went to #1 on the pop chart.

Most of Moore's two solos use the moveable blues scale, but he started the first solo with a first-position C blues scale and a pentatonic C scale which is the same as an A moveable blues position. You could call this latter device a "relative minor/ substitute blues scale" (because Am is the relative minor to C).

Moore's "power-chord" backup is a set pattern throughout the tune. The rhythm section plays on that fine rockabilly line between the rock beat (straight four, like the Thornton hit) and country shuffle/swing. It was recorded July 2, 1956.

Recorded September 2nd, 1956, TOO MUCH went to the top of the charts in January of '57. Moore's backup is very planned out; he plays a boogie bass line throughout the backup. His interesting, eccentric lead has a swingy feel; it's not at all the standard blues bag-of-licks.

READY TEDDY

Recorded the day after the session that produced TOO MUCH, this hard rocker had already been a hit for Little Richard. Moore's chordal solo is reminiscent of Little Richard's pounding piano style. The tempo is fast, and the whole track has a strong groove. The repetitious guitar figures in Moore's second solo propel it along.

JAILHOUSE ROCK

This track, recorded April 30, 1957, is often said to be one of Elvis' best RCA offerings. It was yet another #1 hit.

The track is in the key of E♭, but the guitar is tuned a fret lower than usual and Moore plays some first position chords and boogie bass patterns. Heavy string bending and power chording give the solo an appropriately raunchy sound.

I NEED YOUR LOVE TONIGHT

(Hank Garland)

Hank Garland played lead guitar on this tune and the next one (A BIG HUNK O' LOVE). Both were recorded June 10, 1958. This one went to #4 on the charts the following year.

Garland played a boogie bass line for backup, and his whole lead solo consisted of two-note "third" harmonies.

A BIG HUNK O' LOVE

(Hank Garland)

This song was a #1 hit in 1959. Garland's solo has a Chuck Berry-style, double-note bluesy lead, as do most of his fills during the verses. There are some string bends (including unison bends), boogie bass lines, rhythmic chord chops, and some pianistic two- and three-note chord pounding, all of which intensify a solid rock groove. Chet Atkins played second guitar!

LITTLE SISTER

(Hank Garland)

This tune was recorded June 26, 1961, and it reached #5 on the charts. Hank Garland played a great "swamp-rock" guitar part, using first-position key-of-E chords. Sometimes the C7 chord was a B7 raised up a fret, which allowed the open B/2nd string to peek through and sound occasionally. It's this type of "discord" — technically wrong — that makes for an authentic bluesy sound.

Garland borrowed his friend and fellow Nashville recording guitarist Harold Bradley's Fender Jazzmaster for this session; he couldn't get the sound he wanted out of the hollow-bodied guitar he usually used.

Scotty Moore probably played lead guitar on this track, which was recorded May 26, 1963, although top Nashville session men Harold Bradley and Grady Martin were also on the session. The song went to #3 and featured an unusual "twin groove"; it alternates between a Latin/ballad feel and a double-time groove. The backup consists of rhythmic chord arpeggios in the Latin parts of the tune and rapid, double-time, up-and-down "cross-picking" with a flatpick in the "cut-time" sections. (The flatpick alternates up-and-down strokes and moves around from string to string.) The solo features string bending, unison bends, and a substitute G blues scale (Gm is the relative minor of the tune's key, B♭). There is also some double-note lead, as in A BIG HUNK O' LOVE.

(James Burton)

James Burton's backup part in this live track (from the March 20, 1974 "LIVE ON STAGE IN MEMPHIS" Lp) resembles his playing on MY BABY LEFT ME and THAT'S ALL RIGHT, MAMA. The solo is a showcase for his string bending and sputtering guitar trademark sounds.

PLAYING ROCK AND ITS ROOTS

Reissues are available of vintage Elvis Presley, Buddy Holly, Eddie Cochran and Carl Perkins recordings. All the early Elvis recordings feature Scotty Moore on guitar. James Burton can be heard on most of Rick Nelson's hits (MILKCOW BLUES, BELIEVE WHAT YOU SAY, SHIRLEY LEE, IT'S LATE to name but a few), and with Elvis after 1969; he's credited on some Emmylou Harris Lps and also appears on some early Merle Haggard (WORKIN' MAN BLUES, for instance).*

Duane Eddy, Chuck Berry and Bo Diddley were important guitar voices during the Rockabilly era (mid to late '50s) and influenced the style. To delve further back into the roots of the music, listen to Merle Travis and Chet Atkins on the fingerpicking side; and to Les Paul and Bill Haley and His Comets' guitar work (Danny Cidrone and Fran Beecher) for single note playing. Single-note western swing guitarists such as those heard on Bob Wills' and Hank Williams' records were an influence as well.

Then there's the blues influence: Listen to single-note stylists T-Bone Walker and B.B. King, and to acoustic players Lightnin' Hopkins, John Lee Hooker (he plays both electric and acoustic) and Big Bill Broonzy for fingerpicking roots and primal blues licks.

Several videos feature early film clips of these legends of rockabilly.*
